Course Description:

Introduce students to the nature and scope of philosophical inquiry. Students will examine some of the basic philosophical questions concerning knowledge (epistemology), reality (metaphysics), and human values (ethics, political philosophy, aesthetics) that underlie all of the major areas of the college curriculum. During their examination of these questions, students will gain an appreciation of some of the broad theoretical perspectives from which they can view other disciplines. They will also develop skills that are common to all disciplines: critical thinking, problem solving, and communication skills. This course teaches how to think critically and approach problems systematically while we consider basic questions addressed by philosophers and the array of responses these questions provoked. The
